

Agreement for Parents

Psychotherapy can be a very important resource for children of separation and divorce. Establishing a therapeutic alliance outside of the home can:

- Facilitate open and appropriate expression of the strong feelings which routinely accompany family transitions, including guilt, grief, sadness and anger.
- Provide an emotionally neutral setting in which children can explore these feelings.
- Help children understand and accept the new family composition and the plans for contact with each member of the family.
- Offer feedback and recommendations to a child's caregivers based on knowledge of the child's specific emotional needs and developmental capacities.

However, the usefulness of such therapy is extremely limited when the therapy itself becomes simply another matter of dispute between parents. With this in mind, and in order to best help your child, I strongly recommend that each of the child's caregivers (e.g. parents, stepparents, daycare workers, guardian ad litem [GAL]) mutually accept the following as requisites to participation in therapy.

1. As your child's psychotherapist, it is my primary responsibility to respond to your child's emotional needs. This includes, but is not limited to, contact with your child and each of his or her caregivers, and gathering information relevant to understanding your child's welfare and circumstances as perceived by important others (e.g. pediatrician, teachers). In some cases, this may include a recommendation that you consult with a physician, should matters of your child's physical health be relevant to this therapy.
2. I ask that all caregivers remain in frequent communication regarding this child's welfare and emotional well-being. Open communication about his or her emotional state and behavior is critical. In this regard, I invite each of you to initiate frequent and open exchange with me as your child's therapist.
3. I ask that all parties recognize and, as necessary, reaffirm to the child, that I am the child's helper and not allied with any disputing party.
4. I strongly recommend that all caregivers involved choose to participate in psycho-educational groups in which separating and divorced parents learn basic strategies for conducting a divorce in the best interests of the child.
5. Please be advised regarding limits of confidentiality as it applies to psychotherapy with the child in these circumstances:
 - I keep records of all contacts relevant to your child's well being. These records are subject to court subpoena and may, under some circumstances, be solicited by parties to your divorce, including attorneys.
 - Any matter brought to my attention by either parent regarding the child may be revealed to the other parent. Matters which are brought to my attention that are irrelevant to the child's welfare may be kept in confidence. However, these matters may best be brought to the attention of others, such as attorneys, personal therapists or counselors.
 - I am legally obligated to bring any concern regarding the child's health and safety to the attention of relevant authorities. When possible, should this necessity arise, I will advise all parties regarding my concerns.

6. This psychotherapy will not yield recommendations about custody or visitation. In general, I recommend that parties who are disputing custody or visitation strongly consider participation in alternative forms of negotiation and conflict resolution, including mediation and custody evaluation, rather than try to settle a custody dispute in court.

7. Payment for my services is due, in full, at the time of service in a manner agreed to by all parties involved. Any outstanding balance accrued (for example, in conference with attorneys, the GAL, or teachers) must be paid promptly and in full. Insurance companies may not pay for services beyond those provided in the course of individual or family therapy. Failure to pay fees may result in discontinuation of treatment. You will be charged for services not related to directly to psychotherapy, including preparation time, court testimony, consultation with attorneys, and any travel and waiting time related to court action, at the hourly rate of $140 dollars. This fee will be split evenly between the parties whose signatures appear below.

Your understanding of these points and agreement in advance of your involvement in therapy may resolve difficulties that would otherwise arise and will help make this therapy successful. Your signature, below, signifies that you have read and accepted these points.
